Two candidates – Karaitina and Tareha – were proposed and seconded in the usual style of Maori eloquence ; and the latter individual was declared to be the successful aspirant to legislative honors on the show of hands, by a majority of one. No poll was demanded, which was much the liest course, as it confined the proceedings to a single day.

United Kingdom general election, 1868

The Poll Book for 1868 shows that 58 Irish-born men were registered and they comprised around 2.8% of the householder voters and 2.4% of the total voters list. At that time Irish-born people formed 2.5% of Stafford's population so the Irish voters were more or less a representative proportion of the electorate.

The United States Presidential Election of 1868, the 21st U.S. presidential election, took place on November 3, 1868. Democrat George H. Pendleton faced off against Republican Benjamin Wade in what would end up being the last presidential election contested by the Republican Party. Blamed with the disastrous results of the Civil War, the Republicans desperately tried to find a way to cling onto ...
