A Change of Climate is set in Norfolk in 1980, and concerns Ralph and Anna Eldred, parents of four children, whose family life threatens to disintegrate in the course of one summer, when memories which they have repressed fiercely for twenty years resurface to disrupt the purposive and peaceful lives they have tried to lead since a catastrophic event overtook them early in their married life.

A Change of Climate moves back and forth between Ralph and Anna Eldred's life in contemporary England, and their experiences as missionaries in southern Africa at the beginning of their marriage, decades earlier. Opening in the present (after a short preliminary scene), Ralph learns at the funeral of a friend that his sister, Emma, had been having an affair with the deceased (and married) man.
