A pitch drop experiment is a long-term experiment which measures the flow of a piece of pitch over many years.

'Pitch' is the name for any of a number of highly viscous liquids which appear solid, most commonly bitumen. At room temperature, tar pitch flows at a very low rate, taking several years to form a single drop.

“Two things changed after that - the 2000 (eighth) and 2014 (ninth) drop each took about 13 years to fall, and each collided into the decades-old pile of drops in the beaker before it could break away from the funnel,” he said. The eighth drop ran into the seventh drop in 2000, but took almost 14 years to tip over.
