Bespoke Menswear Tailoring For Gentlemen
The majority of today's men wear ready-to-wear or made-to-measure clothes produced in factories. Only a very small minority of gentleman dress in bespoke clothes made by tailors, but 200 years ago every garment was made by hand. This article explains how clothes handmade by tailors have evolved from being an everyday product available in various price and quality categories to something ...

A heads-up for gentlemen here, affected all these years by the green SC-fad, it is to my understanding that in the Emenegildo Zegna Anteprima SS'21, there are two solid, dark green jacketing fabrics, one in w-s-l and the other in wool-silk. I have not yet seen them in person due to the lock-down, a glimpse may be taken in tessin.it, without being able to judge how close their posted images ...

Dressing for the Weather. Of course, British weather is notorious for one thing: rain. And, while Scandinavian men may know how to dress for long winters, men in the UK are adept at looking good despite constantly wet weather.This means you're likely to encounter more full-length umbrellas; waxed cotton Barbour jackets (even worn on top of suits); head gear, such as flat caps; and Wellie boots.
