During the First World War, mass media and propaganda were used extensively. Through the use of patriotic and nationalistic themed advertisements and posters, the US government and other organizations, such as the Red Cross, targeted the public in an attempt to alter their opinion and to induce them to enlist in the military, buy war bonds, and support the war effort.

The flow studies contained in this book were a staple of Mr. Cichowicz's teaching. Each lesson he would start with the Long Tone Studies and use them to expand the effortless middle G up and down the register. Once this goal had been achieved, he would move on to the second study from H.L. Clarke's Technical Studies for Trumpet.
