sting - desert rose with lyrics
Potted desert roses can go outdoors during the warm months and indoors for the winter. If you pot the plant, use a rich potting soil. Outdoor soil should drain well to keep the succulent from getting too much water. Because the desert rose loves the heat, put it in a warm, sunny spot if you grow it indoors.

Cut back long, lanky shoots to about the same length as other stems, using a pair of sharp, clean pruners. Prune any branches that rub or cross other branches. Make the cuts just above a leaf node, or where the stem joins with another stem. This way, there is no unsightly stub. When pruning a desert rose,...

To dramatically cut back your desert rose, do a hard prune. This will allow you to clear out leggy branches or reduce the size of the plant. Limit hard pruning to once every 2 to 3 years. If your desert rose is planted outside, it's still a good idea to do a hard prune since this will help it flower in the spring.
