Fiber optic cables are network cables that are composed of a bundle of thin, glass fibers within an insulated jacket. Since they are designed with the ability to quickly carry a larger amount of data over a longer distance than traditional copper wires, these cables have become the leader in network solutions over the past several decades.

Fiber Optic Network Solutions | The Many Uses And Benefits ...

Fiber-optic communication is a method of transmitting information from one place to another by sending pulses of infrared light through an optical fiber. The light forms an electromagnetic carrier wave that is modulated to carry information. Fiber is preferred over electrical cabling when high bandwidth, long distance, or immunity to electromagnetic interference are required.

Optical fiber is used as a medium for telecommunication and computer networking because it is flexible and can be bundled as cables. It is especially advantageous for long-distance communications, because infrared light propagates through the fiber with much lower attenuation compared to electrical cables. This allows long distances to be spanned with few repeaters.
