Packham, 54, revealed he had been diagnosed with Asperger's syndrome in his 20s, and described his thoughts as a "great, hopeless vacuum". The naturalist, who presents the BBC's Springwatch, Autumnwatch and Winterwatch programmes, spoke of his difficulties in an interview with the Times marking the release of his memoir, Fingers in the Sparkle Jar.

Fingers In The Sparkle Jar

Fingers in the Sparkle Jar: A Memoir is well written and highly original: non-linear, multiple points of view, and rooted in Chris's Asperger's Syndrome condition. Alas, there is, perhaps unsurprisingly, just too much about animals and nature.
