German Navy in World War 2, surface ships

Powerful units on paper, the handsome, twin stack, German destroyers of the Second World War generally failed to perform to expectations. Some classes were armed with 5.9" (150mm) guns, but these guns proved to be too heavy and slow firing for many destroyer purposes, so the final class of German destroyers to see service, the 1936B type (launched 1942-1944), reverted to 5" main battery guns.

WW2 German Warships and Submarines (1939-1945)

The German navies—specifically the Kaiserliche Marine and Kriegsmarine of Imperial and Nazi Germany, respectively—built a series of battleships between the 1890s and 1940s. To defend its North and Baltic Sea coasts in wartime, Germany had previously built a series of smaller ironclad warships, including coastal defense ships, and armored frigates. With the accession to the throne of Kaiser Wilhelm II in 1888, the Kaiserliche Marine began a program of naval expansion befitting a Great ...
