Globalization can increase wage inequality in a relatively rich country by increasing the imports of manufactured goods using predominantly low-skilled labor from developing countries. Conversely, it opens more opportunities for exports in high-tech firms that use more high-skilled labor.

Globalization and Inequality — Elhanan Helpman | Harvard ...

As the developing world continues to get richer, global inequality will continue to fall. But there is more to the story than this: economic globalization has also increased inequality within individual countries, partially offsetting the effects of the convergence of the rest with the West.

Theorist Eric Maskin: Globalization Is Increasing Inequality

In The Globalization of Inequality, distinguished economist and policymaker François Bourguignon examines the complex and paradoxical links between a vibrant world economy that has raised the living standard of over half a billion people in emerging nations such as China, India, and Brazil, and the exponentially increasing inequality within countries.

Inequality and Globalization | Foreign Affairs

Global inequality (the relative inequality of incomes among all peoples in the world) raised from 1820 to about 1990. This increase was driven by different growth processes among countries. Inequality within countries was stagnant or falling over much of this period, most notably over the middle half of the twentieth century.

Globalization May Increase Inequality There is a considerable debate among economists about the extent to which globalization—and specifically the liberalization of trade and investment—may increase inequality.

Globalization and Inequality | Center For Global Development

Globalization and Inequality guides us through two decades of research about the connections among international trade, offshoring, and changes in income, and shows that the overwhelming conclusion of contemporary research is that globalization is responsible for only a small rise in inequality. The chief causes remain difficult to pin down, though technological developments favoring highly skilled workers and changes in corporate and public policies are leading suspects.
