Melanie Bluelake's Dream: Betty Fitzpatrick Dorion ...

Melanie Bluelake's Dream by Betty Dorion (Coteau) looked like it would interest my eleven-year-old son. It's a small book so I didn't mind carrying it home, and of course, once on the bus, I pulled it out to take a look. I liked this story of a ten-year-old Cree girl who moves to the city with her mother.

The Dust Factory is an unusual film about young teenagers, because it deals with issues of life and death instead of the usual commercialized pap about climbing high school social ladders or kids with super powers. As the film opens, we see Ryan Flynn (Ryan Kelley) at his grandmother's funeral, reacting to seeing her open casket, and flinching at the burial site when he is asked to shovel ...

Melanie Bluelake's Dream is the moving story of a ten-year-old Cree girl from northern Saskatchewan who experiences leaving the safety of her reserve home to find a new residence in Prince Albert. Melanie's mother decides to return to school and complete her education.

Graphic Organizer Research Paper

Melanie Bluelake's Dream provides a vivid child's-eye glimpse into a process happening every day on streets and in schools throughout Canada. With refreshing clarity, it captures the ambivalence felt by many Native people struggling to feel at home in an urban world of someone else's making.

Melanie Bluelakes Dream - s2.kora.com

Melanie Bluelake's Dream is a way of introducing non-native children to the reality of the situation in a fairly gentle manner. There's talk about poverty, and about the lack of hot water on the reserve, but the reserve is still painted in a fairly positive way. It is Melanie's home and she loves it because of that.
