My Reclaimed Life - About Ed
The only other alcohol in our home as I grew up was a bottle of Old Granddad whiskey that sat on the top shelf of a kitchen cabinet. It was about a third full and never changed during the first fourteen years of my life. My parents either gave it away or tossed it when we moved to Miami in 1965. At least, I don't remember seeing it again.

Of all the people I hurt in my life, I hurt no one more than myself. I hurt myself by doing things that would make me feel guilt and shame later on. When I finally got the right treatment and got sober, after a decade of madness, I heard people speak about serenity and finding peace of mind. In early recovery, it was still an utter mystery to me.
