Formula milk: common questions - NHS

Formula milk, also known as infant formula or sometimes just 'formula', is a substitute for breast milk that can be used either as an alternative to breastfeeding, or as a way of supplementing it. Formula is usually (but not always) made from cow's milk, which is specially processed to make it suitable for babies to drink.

Special baby formulas For babies under 12 months of age, cow's milk-based baby formula is recommended over formulas made from soybeans, goat's milk or low-lactose or lactose-free formula. But babies who can't have cow's milk-based formula might need special formula. You should use special baby formulas only under medical supervision.

Formula Feeding Calculator
Most newborns need eight to 12 feedings a day – about one feeding every two to three hours. Look for early signs of readiness to feed, such as moving the hands to the mouth, sucking on fists and fingers, and lip smacking. Fussing and crying are later cues. The sooner you begin each feeding, the less likely you'll need to soothe a frantic baby.
