Our children have always love the drawing and writing journals that we pick up every year. The only thing that's hard is having them inside a journal book and not as loose leaf paper. There are many times that I like to include them in a lapbook we are working on or as part of another project we make.

In my third grade classroom, students write in journals every day for about 20 minutes. Each day, after read-aloud time, the kids go back to their desks, pull out their journals, and start writing! By writing every day, the students gain fluency while getting a chance to practice important punctuation, spelling, and style skills in context.

Quinn is well-trained in maintaining his own writing journal. I just plan on setting it up, along with his writing and coloring supplies and letting him do the rest. Aside from practicing his handwriting, spelling, creating clear sentences and practicing forming and getting his ideas across—he will have a nice summer journal.
