courses he developed in what was then a little-known field. On taking up an appointment at the American Museum of Natural History in 1953, Mason's first task was to check and re-catalogue the large meteorite collection, kindling a long-term interest.

Brian Mason (Author of Principles of Geochemistry)

Brian Harold Mason (18 April 1917 – 3 December 2009) was a New Zealand geochemist and mineralogist who was one of the pioneers in the study of meteorites. He played a leading part in understanding the nature of the solar system through his studies of meteorites and lunar rocks.
