In 1969 Hazel Sig, Then President of Sig Mfg. Co., rebuilt a standard 1941 Piper J-3 Cub for airshow flying. To increase the plane's aerobatic performance, 40 inches were clipped off each wing panel and the engine was reworked for greater horsepower. The result is a highly aerobatic Cub that is a real joy to fly!

The Clipped Wing version of the Cub is an excellent trainer because it is responsive, crisp on the controls and has a better power-to-weight ratio. Having trained students in small and large aircraft, I appreciate an aircraft that responds nimbly when you need to recover from a student's less-than-perfectly-executed maneuver.
