The floating opera and the end of the road (Book, 1988 ...
The End of the Road can be viewed with The Floating Opera (1956) as forming the early, existentialist or nihilist phase of Barth's writing career. This phase was realistic in a modernist sense; it lacked the fantastic elements that manifested themselves in Barth's experimental phase that began with The Sot-Weed Factor (1960).

The End of the Road - Wikipedia
The Floating Opera is my second Barth novel after reading The End of the Road, reversing the order of these 'twin' works. The themes and even personal dynamics between main characters are very similar between these two books, but somehow I feel that Opera is the one with more mature and human philosophizing, and more natural, less pretentious story-telling.

Summary/Reviews: The floating opera and The end of the road
The Floating Opera after some rejections, an ending change that was later restored, and various other problems ended up being paired with 'The End' as two sides of the same mindset Barth was in at the time in the mid-50s. Yeah, these are getting old aren't they? Knowing he wrote these in the 50s not far out of college is something to consider.
