The Ship Who Sang (Brainship, #1) by Anne McCaffrey

The Ship Who Sang is more classical science fiction--could be even called space opera--but what makes it memorable is the title character, Helva. Born severely handicapped, she was turned into an unusual kind of Cyborg, a "brain"--her "body" is the ship itself which she controls the way we would a limb or breathing.

The Ship Who Sang: A Novel (Brainship): Anne McCaffrey ...

The ship who sang is a historical science fiction piece that comprises short vignettes which exercise both technological speculation and contemporary commentary. I liked the angle on time and space travel that is taken: interstellar travel is routine, but apart from the very long times needed to get to faraway places, the days weeks or years needed for the trips taken in the various stories is never mentioned.
